

THE GRAVEYARD FEEDER

For groundskeeper Burke Sawyer, discovering a body zip-tied to the south gate of Juniper Falls Cemetery becomes more than an inconvenience. The crumbling graveyard is under investigation due to multiple complaints and dreads a surprise visit from a state official with the intent of shutting it down. When the incinerator won't light, Burke is forced to bury the mysterious body into a previously occupied plot.

Later that night, the caretaker is haunted by his father's ghost, who warns him the newly buried is a local witch feeding on the remains of the town's dearly departed and his son is to blame. The souls begin to haunt their loved ones while the boneyard turns into the witch's personal buffet.

With his trusty shovel and father's corpse by his side, Burke Sawyer must rise up and become the anti-hero the graveyard needs.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

In another life (and under a different name) Jack Keaton was a multi-award winning filmmaker and a hardcore fan of all things horror. He was a proud alumni of the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, MA and University of North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston Salem, NC. He now resides in a small Southern town where the Spanish moss hangs and festers. He lives with his wife and children on what is believed to be a haunted burial ground.
